TUCHUN FIRM

Four Demands Made On Peking Before He Gives Consent

(Staff Wire To The China Press)

Hankow, July 20.—Anfu forces here have been submissively placed under the control of General Wang Chuan-yuan, Tuchun of this province, after he had captured both their leaders, Wu Kwang-hsin and Chang Ching-yao.

General Wang has placed these soldiers at nearby towns and has cleared the cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang of all Anfu forces.

A telegram has been received by the Hupeh Tuchun from Peking officials, demanding the release of Wu Kwang-hsin.

In response, General Wang consented to do so under four conditions including the dismissal of Wu from the Inspector-Generalship of the Upper Yangtsze, the disbandment and repatriation of all Wu's troops in Hupeh; the repayment of all his debts to himself (Wang), and the punishment of Wu for his conduct—the attempted murder of the Tuchun with bombs.

The influence of Tuchun Wang is ruling high. The Wuhan cities are all quiet, while people are confident that General Wang Chuan-yuan will be the master of the situation.

YUNNANESE WIN NEAR CHENGTU

Tuchun Of Szechuen Prepares To Flee; Hsiung Is Back

Chengtu, July 10.—The Yunnanese occupied Yanghsien yesterday at noon, thus completely surrounding the First Szechuen Division. The Tuchun has only a few troops between Yanghsien and Chengtu.

The Yunnanese have also occupied Kiatingfu.

The Fifth Division at Luchow is again moving against the Tuchun, along the North Road. The Tuchun is preparing for immediate flight.

HSIUNG RETURNS

Chengtu, July 9.—General Hsiung has returned to Chengtu. Peace has been restored on the North Road.

As the Fifth Yunnanese Division has agreed not to fight, the Tuchun has transferred all his available forces, including the Third Division, to the east, where he intends to develop a big attack against the Yunnanese.

The Yunnanese have evacuated Tzechow and an important engagement is in progress in that district.

TUCHUN BEATEN

Chengtu, July 6.—The Tuchun's forces have been badly defeated and are retiring on Chengtu. The Yunnanese have occupied Tzechow. The Tuchun has left Chengtu to encourage his troops to a final effort.

The third and fifth Szechuen divisions are remaining neutral, while the fourth and eighth are not helping General Hsiung.

SEVEN RECKLESS DRIVERS FINED BY MIXED COURT

Crusade Against Careless Motor Car Handling Is Bearing Fruit

The campaign of The China Press to make Shanghai roads safe for citizens thereof is bearing fruit. Yesterday a total of seven reckless chauffeurs were haled before the Mixed Court and fined for improper driving.

In several instances foreigners appeared to prosecute the reckless drivers; and in one case a master brought in his own chauffeur, and accused him of carelessness.

Little time was required for the complainants in the cases to file their charges, and none objected to the inconvenience of going to court in order that the safety of the community at large might be promoted.

CALLED 'EM QUICK

American Assessor Tenney and Magistrate Kwan showed consideration for the public-spirited citizens who made the complaints, and saw to it that the motor-car cases were called at the head of docket.

The man who was brought in by his master for driving at a rate of 35 miles an hour on Jessfield Road, when the thoroughfare was crowded with traffic, was fined $30.

Two drivers who were reckless on Nanking Road were fined $10 each.

$20 FROM HIM

A careless driver who imperilled lives at Seward and Chaoufong Roads was assessed $20.

Two chauffeurs who attempted to speed on The Bund paid fines of $10 each.

The seventh victim of the speed mania was arrested at Broadway and Hwakee Road and was fined $10.

No Chance For Peace In Siberia Until Japanese Play Square, Says Ukase

Far Eastern Republic, In Open Declaration, Tells Inhabitants Of Dai Nippon Of Price Which Must Be Paid For Oriental Tranquility

(Delta News Agency)

Verdne-Udinsk, July 13.—The following is the declaration to the Japanese people issued by the government of the Far Eastern Republic:

"Having in view the establishment of durable peace throughout the territory of the Far East, the Government of the Far Eastern Republic, which is authoritatively expressing the expectations and free will of the peoples who inhabit this republic, addresses, through the medium of the Japanese Delegation, to the Japanese people, the presentation of the fundamental principles of its peaceful policy and the practical problems this government intends to solve at the coming peace negotiations.

ALL MUST AGREE

"All those to whom the interests of peace and the well-being of the peoples of the Far East are dear; who, not by words but by deeds seek the way out for the population of the Far Eastern provinces from the abyss of misery, violence, nightmare and privations in which they have been involved by Semenoff, Kalmikoff and General Horvath—as well as by those who have been supporting these international adventurers in their rebellion against the freedom and independence of the people—cannot but agree with the just aspirations of the working people of the Far Eastern Republic to preserve their freedom, their independence and the sovereignity of their State.

DEMAND FREEDOM

"Only on the principle of independence can peace and order be established in the Far East. Only on condition of its being preserved can the people of the Far Eastern provinces return to peaceful creative work, and the valuable human blood cease to flow in vain.

"In the foundation of the independence of the Far East we lay the principle of the unification of the Far Eastern provinces of Transbaikalia, Amur, Maritime, Saghalin and Kamchatka into a Far Eastern Republic, with a government vested with political and economic power at the head of this Republic.

JAPS MUST GO

"The evacuation of the Japanese troops and the convocation of a local constituent assembly, made up of representatives of the working people, is the only means of effecting this unification; which has, up to the present time, been retarded by civil war and disorder in the zone of military activities, where the Japanese forces have practically become a bulwark for the forces of our internal counter-revolution, in the person of Semenoff's gangs, which prevent the establishment of peace and order throughout the territory of our Republic.

"But the peoples of the Far East, as well as the people of Japan, will never agree to recognise, even for a local authority, the ruffian Semenoff, whom the Japanese Command recognised as a local government—nor will they ever agree to negotiate with him.

ARMISTICE NECESSARY

"The fundamental condition necessary for the establishment of peace and order in the territory of the Far Eastern Republic, within its geographical boundaries, which have frequently been violated by the Atamans and oppressors, and by occupation, is the proclamation of an armistice on all the fronts of the Republic—and the convocation, in the seat of the Government, in Verdne-Udinsk, of a conference of representatives of the district governments, to promote the restoration of durable peace in the Far East.

"Chervonny, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs."

MEMORIAL SERVICE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, July 19.—The Cathedral was packed today during the memorial service for the late Tsar and the Imperial family. Hundreds could not obtain admittance and stood outside. Many people were weeping during the service.

During the conference of the Far Eastern States, to discuss the formation of a single Far Eastern Republic, the Verdhne-Udinsk government demanded that they should be recognised as the leading government in the Far East.

The Japanese would not agree to this and, with a view to facilitating negotiations, this question was dropped for the time being.

BOUNDARIES ACCEPTED

The boundaries of the proposed Far-Eastern Republic were agreed upon.

The armistice on all Far-Eastern fronts, as recently agreed upon by the Japanese Command and the Verdhne-Udinsk Government, began yesterday. General Semenoff has signified his agreement to all the above proposals.

The Japanese are rapidly withdrawing their troops from the Zabaikal; but, in the event of the Soviet forces crossing the River Morson, they will re-enter the Zabaikal with larger forces than before.

ANOTHER EXECUTION

Vladivostok, July 19.—A telegram received from Kierbi, northwest of Nikolaievsk, states that a revolution has taken place there, in which Triapicin, the Partisan leader, and his followers were overthrown. He was condemned to death, and executed on July 12.

The authority is now in the hands of the revolutionary staff under M. Andreyeff, who recognises the Verdhne-Udinsk Government.

CERCLE SPORTIF PLANS MOVE TO VERDUN GARDENS

Sale Of Present Quarters To Municipality In View; Meeting Is Called

The Cercle Sportif Francais is to have a new home and a premier place is realised the organisation in time to come will be housed in the finest club establishment in the Far East—possibly, one of the finest in the world, in the Verdun Gardens. The change, which has been contemplated for some time, and for which considerable preparation has already been made, is a consequence of the rapidly growing membership of the club.

To meet the need that was developing the executive body of the Cercle Sportif Francais after the subject had received more or less discussion at meetings of members opened negotiations for the disposal of the fine quarters the club has been occupying in the French Municipality. It is understood now that a definite arrangement has been arrived at with the municipality which proposes to use the property to be purchased to house its municipal offices.

Arrangements have been brought to the point where all that is needed is confirmatory action on the part of the membership as endorsement of negotiations that have been concluded by the executive body. This matter is to be taken up at an extraordinary general meeting of members of the club to be held at the Club House Saturday, July 31 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Notice calling this meeting has been issued by the Secretary, Dr. E. L. Tartois.

In line with the general plan for the new club building the membership is being asked to come forward with architectural and other suggestions. For this purpose a special register has been installed in the club's reading room where suggestions of the kind asked for may be presented.

Jap Laborers Demand Chance To Organise

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, July 20.—Representatives of twelve labor unions with a membership of 150,000, met here yesterday and passed a resolution demanding the right to organise in accordance with the Treaty Labor convention.

A committee was appointed to interview the Premier and other officials with regard to this demand.

The resolution condemned the action of the Fuji Cotton Spinning Company in offering its employes, who are on strike, a bonus of 1,000,000 Yen, provided that they pledged themselves to remain unorganised. The strikers debated the proposal but finally rejected it.

The capital and labor harmonisation Board, headed by Baron Shibusawa, is ready to mediate in the Fuji strike.

SOVIET PLANS REMEDIES FOR MONEY CRISIS IN VLADIVOSTOK

Sino-Japanese Boycott Against New Russ Currency Causes An Embroglio

FOOD COMMITTEE ACTS

Russian Paper Complains Against Apathy Shown By Government

("Russia" News Agency)

Vladivostok, July 10.—The City Food Committee is taking extraordinary steps to combat the boycott of new Russian money begun by Japanese and Chinese residents in this city.

Measures are being taken to supply Russian food stores in the city with flour and other articles of prime necessity whenever the opportunity renders it possible.

There is enough flour in store, and in this respect the population is threatened with no danger. Special agents have been sent throughout the district to purchase fish and other foodstuffs and to bring them to Vladivostok.

As a result of the boycott, Chinese bakers have gone out on strike. The Food Department of the City Zemstvo Board has called upon Russian bakers to replace the Chinese.

DISCHARGING STRIKERS

The co-operative society, "Economist," is discharging Chinese bakers and replacing them by Russians. Detachments made up of war invalids and refugees are being formed to facilitate the distribution of food and vegetables among the population.

Besides this, the Food Department has organised a number of "flying" food detachments, to supply the population with food and other articles of prime necessity which the population were wont to buy from the Chinese retail merchants.

These articles are being sold to the population from such cars.

MARKS DIFFERENCE

Commenting on the Japanese boycott of the new Russian paper money, the Golos Rodini says:

"At the time when the Chinese began the boycott of Japanese goods in China, the Japanese grew indignant and lodged a protest with the Chinese Government against such action, calling it unfair and unjust.

"At the present time, when the Japanese initiate a boycott of new Russian money, and conduct a strong propaganda in favor of it is boycott, thus insulting Russian laws in every way possible, we do not hear anything that may resemble the course of action taken by the Japanese in China by the time.

MUST KEEP GOING

"The Russian people must bear in mind that only through strenuous efforts may we preserve our political and economic independence.

"If there were any Russians who have had any doubts as to the real value of Japanese Kultur, the recent official announcement by the Japanese Foreign Office, relative to the lease of Russian fisheries in Nikolaievsk, will make them understand what sort of cultured people the Japanese are, and what we may expect from them.

"Everything is being done in accordance with the highest principles of Bushido."

FISHERIES EMBROGLIO

The announcement in question was as follows:

"The Japanese Consul-General in Vladivostok has received the following telegram from the Japanese foreign office in Tokio:

"'All fisheries and fish canneries in the mouth of the Amur river, which have not so far been leased by anyone, should be offered for lease by orders of the Commander-in-chief of the Japanese troops in Nikolaievsk.

"'The bidding for the lease of these fisheries will take place in the middle part of July.

"'Only such Russian subjects who are considered by the Japanese authorities as politically reliable, and who are experts on fishing business, will be allowed to lease fisheries.

"'The location of fisheries, rent conditions and other particulars will be announced by the Japanese military authorities.'"

Farm Laborer Inherits Millon

(Reuter's Service)

New York, July 18.—A sensation has been created in the hamlet of Boyleston, Mass., by the discovery that a local farm laborer, David Cant, is one of the heirs to a million-dollar estate at Dundee. The lawyers had searched for him for years.

Cant is leaving Boyleston to claim his inheritance.

Son Of Ex-Kaiser Despondent; Kills Himself

(Reuter's Service)

Berlin, July 18.—Prince Joachim of Prussia, sixth son of the ex-Kaiser, has shot himself. He had been suffering from great mental depression. He was in his thirtieth year.

The recent unprovoked assault on French officials at the Hotel Adlon in Berlin, by Prince Joachim, and the Prince's subsequent arrest and confinement, are looked upon as one of the chief causes of the Von Kapp riots.

The altercation at the Hotel Adlon grew out of the refusal of the French officers to stand during the playing of the German anthem. This photograph of the Prince was made a few days before his arrest during a military review in Berlin.

OFFICER OF R.I.C. IS MURDERED BY 14 ARMED MEN

Colonel Smyth, V.C., Foully Assassinated In Cork By Malcontents

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 18.—Police-Commissioner Smyth of Munster was assassinated today at the County Club at Cork. Fourteen armed men forced their way into the club and fired on the Commissioner, who fell, riddled with bullets, and died almost immediately.

There is unusual military activity in Cork and some arrests have been effected. An ex-soldier who came into contact with the military was killed.

It appears that a dozen armed men walked into the club; some guarded the door, while others proceeded to the smoking-room, where Colonel Smyth (who was a V.C.) was talking with two friends.

SHOT MANY TIMES

The raiders fired several shots at the Police Commissioner; who got up, staggered, tried to run, was shot again, and fell dead.

County Inspector Craig was shot in the leg. The raiders then disappeared.

Colonel Smyth's name was prominently mentioned in the House of Commons last week, owing to a speech he was alleged to have made to the police at Listowel, Co. Kerry, ordering the men not to be afraid to shoot with effect.

He had just returned from London, where he had given the Irish Office an explanation of the affair.

President And Candidate In Perfect Agreement On The Campaign

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, July 18.—After conferring for an hour with Governor Cox, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, President Wilson stated that he found that they were in absolute accord regarding the League of Nations.

"Governor Cox," the President added, "will have the support of an absolutely united party in his championship of America's honor to secure the peace of the world."

Governor Cox declared that if he were elected, he would endeavor, with all his strength to give what President Wilson had promised to those sacrificed in the war.

He and President Wilson were agreed with regard to the meaning and sufficiency of the Democratic platform, and the duty of the Democratic Party, in the face of threatened bad faith to the world, in the name of America.

BY NATHANIEL PEFFER

Peking, July 20.—A military train conveying 50 marines from the American, British, French and Japanese Legation guards is leaving Peking for Tientsin to reopen the railway line. They are being accompanied by officials of the Ministry of Communications.

It is reported that the railway has not been torn up at all, but was held up because of the congestion of military trains at Yangtsun.

Little Hsu is rushing reinforcements along the Tientsin line.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 19 (9:30 p.m.)—Faced with insurmountable difficulties, Marshal Tuan Chi-jui today handed in his resignation of the command of the Tingkuo army, but the President would not accept it.

At the same time Marshal Tuan offered peace terms amounting to complete capitulation. These are stated to be:

(1) Punishment of General Hsu Shu-tseng;

(2) Discharge of all troops under the Marshal's command;

(3) Dismissal of Parliament;

(4) Dismissal of the three Anfu Cabinet Ministers; and

(5) Suppression of the Anfu Club.

These terms are being communicated to the Chihli leaders through a group of officers, who left Peking this morning for Tientsin.

CHAU ADVANCES

Canton, July 18.—General Chau Chi-ching, a former commander under Li Yao-han, the ex-Civil Governor of Kwangtung, is leading an expedition in the four big districts of Kwangtung against the local authorities.

It is stated that they have been instructed by the Tuan party to take up arms against the Kwangsi military party, which is supporting General Tsao Kun against the Anfu militarists.

The Yeungkong and Shuhung districts are also affected by the present troubles in Peking, as some of the local commanders are opposed to the military government, siding with General Tsao Kun and the Chihli party.

A comprehensive declaration of policy has been announced by the so-called League of Eight Tuchuns in a joint telegram they have addressed to President Hsu, the Cabinet, the Ministries and to the civil and military governors of the provinces.

In this message Tuan Chi-jui is denounced as a traitor and it is given as the intention of the League to "exterminate all the traitors in order to strengthen the position of the country."

TEXT OF MESSAGE

The text of the message is as follows:

"In view of the fact that the hostility between North and South has been going on for months and years, and that the Government has been unable to cope with the difficult situation, it is imperative that we should act together to save the nation.

"We shall therefore take the same attitude towards internal affairs and promote peace between North and South in concert so that our people may enjoy order and prosperity. We are not at all willing to become hostile towards each other, thus bringing destruction to the nation.

"Being military men and entrusted with the sacred duty of protecting the country, we, Tsao Kun and others, are uniting ourselves in the support of the Central Government. So long as the Central Government is supported and in a strong position, reforms can be undertaken without difficulty.

HITS ANFU PARTY

"The Anfu Party, relying upon its dominant position in Parliament and having usurped govern-

...ental power, has, however, been directing the national policy for its personal benefit of its members. Its acts are against the will of the people. It has created a critical situation which threatens the country's existence. Its activities undermined the Central Government and the Constitution.

"Worst of all it has been threatening the Government with force of arms. All these intrigues have been planned by Hsu Shu-tsing.

"Knowing the treachery of the Anfu Party and its leaders the President issued the Mandate dismissing Hsu Shu-tseng as High Commissioner of the North-western Defense Force and took away from him the control of soldiers in order to avoid disaster from party politics.

CHOW'S NOMINATION

"At the same time, Chow Shu-mou on account of the resignation of Chin Yun-peng from the Premiership, was nominated to be his successor, in the hope that there would be reorganisation of the Cabinet at an early time, and the nation's foundation may be solidified by means of civil methods. Unexpectedly there came the terrible news that there was an extraordinary change of the situation. Tuan Chi-jui appointed Tuan Chi-kwei as Commander-in-Chief, despatched the Frontier Defense force towards Paotingfu, and declared war against the Chihli troops. He also planned to capture Kiangsu, Hupei, Honan and Kiangsi. He has been bringing pressure to bear upon the President in demanding the issue of a mandate for a punitive expedition.

PRESIDENT WATCHED

"At present the movement of the President is being watched. He has thus lost his personal freedom. His power has been usurped by the several traitors, who are working for a personal end. The Government is in danger. These tyrants are now enemies of the whole nation. The Constitution provides that the Chief Executive is vested with the power to appoint and also to dismiss officials. Now, on account of the dismissal of Hsu Shu-tsing, these traitors have ignored the Government's order and resorted to arms.

"As to the Chihli side, we have the following to say: Since the Chihli troops were despatched to Hunan, they have endured hardships and it is only just to give the soldiers a rest.

"For that reason, these troops were ordered by the Central Government to withdraw from the Hunan front and return to their old camps in Chihli. They have not done anything in violation of law and therefore do not deserve any punishment. However, with the intention to kill all his opponents by one stroke Tuan Chi-jui made use of their withdrawal from the Hunan front as an excuse; for the sake of Hsu Shu-tsung and also for that of the Anfu Party, he declared war against them and did not hesitate to besiege the President's Palace with troops and took away from him the Presidential powers.

STATES AIMS

"We always consider it our duty to preserve peace. We are now finding it impossible to avert the struggle between the members of one family and are driven to resort to arms in redressing the wrong which has been done to us, to save the Chief Executive from the impending danger and, last but not the least, to prevent the country from going into pieces.

"We want to exterminate all the traitors in order to strengthen the position of the country. It is the present situation that has reduced China to such a deplorable state of affairs, over which we are deeply grieved. We hope we have the sympathy of all of our elders and brothers in this important undertaking.

"Tsao Kun, Military Governor of Chihli.

"Chang Tso-lin, Higher Military Commissioner of Three Eastern Provinces.

"Wang Chuan-yuan, Military Governor of Hupeh.

"Li Shun, Military Governor of Kiangsu.

"Cheng Kwang-yuan, Military Governor of Kiangsi.

"Chao Ti, Military Governor of Honan.

"Tsai Cheng-hsun, Tartar General of Charhar.

"Ma Fu-hsiang, Defense Commissioner of Ning Hsia, Kansu."

Boston Beauty Wins Libel Suit Against London Daily

Miss Gladys Deacon, noted beauty of Boston, and sister of Princess Ridziwill, won a verdict of £2,500 in her libel suit against the London Daily Graphic for the paper's publication of a report that Miss Deacon had been expelled from Germany because of her friendship for the German Crown Prince. Miss Deacon's attorney, according to a report from London, branded the report as without foundation, and declared that his client had met the Crown Prince before the war at Blenheim Castle, the home of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough. After that time she had never communicated with or heard from the Crown Prince.

Glee Club And Willoughby Will Be Guests At Tiffin Of University Club Today

Interesting Program Promised By Former Advisor To Peking Administration And Golden State Songsters; Record Attendance Expected

A record attendance is expected at the Carlton this noon when the University Club will give a tiffin in honor of the California University Glee Club and Dr. W. W. Willoughby, former legal advisor to the Chinese Government and professor of political science at Johns Hopkins. The tiffin will be served promptly at 12:20 and will be over before 2 o'clock.

Doctor Willoughby will speak on the present political situation in China from the viewpoint of a foreigner. Dr. Willoughby's opinions on Far Eastern questions have always been considered as fair and just by all students of the Orient. He has just recently published a book on "Foreign Rights and Interests in China," which is attracting world wide favorable comment.

COLLEGIANS TO SING

The songsters from the Gold State institution will entertain with music. The Glee Club has brought with it one of the most enjoyable phases of college life.

Mr. Tang Shao-yi, Chief South peace delegate and president of the club will act as toastmaster. The meeting will be open to wives, relatives and friends of the members.

Mr. "Brick" Morse, director of the Glee Club is expected to relate his experience with the club in its tour throughout the Orient.

The University Club at Shanghai is giving its hearty support to the visiting collegians; and Secretary Don D. Patterson has circulated a letter among its members, urging them to make the stay of the college men in this city pleasant.

TEXT OF LETTER

The letter follows:

"It has been the policy of the American University Club in the past to give recognition and support to all college and university activities in Shanghai and an excellent opportunity for showing an appreciation of one of the phases of American college life is now being offered.

"The University of California Glee Club and Jazz Band is now playing at the Olympic Theater, giving a typical college glee program, and an exhibition of the best of this side of University life. The program will be given for five nights and will be changed three times, allowing a variety of vocal, instrumental and other numbers.

"The club is a purely college organisation but the performances staged approach a plane of professional excellence and their trip thus far in the Orient has been exceptionally successful.

"We in Shanghai do not want to let anything that is possible for us to do to make their stay here a success pass by and the University Club urges all of its members to attend at least one evening, and to do all they possibly can to make the stay of these men in this city pleasant."

MARRIAGE MUST GO SAYS BOOK; DEALER ARRESTED

Mr. Jiggs Is Suspected Of Authorship Of Anonymous Publication

Authorship of a book which figured in a Mixed Court case yesterday was not revealed but Mr. Jiggs is suspected. A few of the changes in world order suggested in the publication are:

Abolition of marriage.
Extermination of the family.
Erasure of national boundaries
Overthrow of the police.
Abrogation of taxation.
Nullification of religion.
Downfall of capitalists and ricsha coolies.

The interesting publication is known as "The Light" and was on sale at the shop of the Ta Tung Book Company in Foochow Road. The manager of the firm was brought before the court on a charge of circulating incendiary literature.

He made a plea of bad luck—he had sold exactly thirteen of the books before he was arrested. And the court dismissed him with a caution.

In two previous cases in which the manager appeared on charges of dispensing inflammatory articles fines amounting to $300 were imposed.

Bolivia Pledges Faith With Chile

(Reuter Service)

Buenos Aires, July 18.—Senor Escalier, the leader of the Bolivian Republican Party, interviewed prior to his departure to join the new Bolivian Government, declared that the new Government did not contemplate a policy hostile to foreign States, particularly to Chile.

The Bolivian Government, he added, would submit its just aspirations to the League of Nations.

Big Oil Discovery In South Alaska?

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 17.—The New York correspondent of the Daily Mail states that Mr. Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, and Mr. Payne, Secretary of the Interior, who are visiting the Alaskan coal fields, are also investigating the reports of a discovery of oil in southwest Alaska.

A destroyer, sent to the spot, reported that 35,000 acres of claims had already been staked by prospectors.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

Clatter and clash of crockery disturbed the meditations of a policeman in Frenchtown when a second cook at the Palace Hotel hurried by, loaded down with Chinaware.

"How come."—or words to that effect—demanded the harness bull.

"These belong one set five piece. Have broke one piecee; must catch new plate allee same," hurriedly explained the ruiner of digestions; and displayed four dinner plates bearing the Palace Hotel hallmark.

"Three weeks," opined the court.

"Nine months in jail," sternly mandated the Court yesterday, when it heard that an employe had sought to depart from the offices of the Sperry Flour Company with two whole pencils belonging to the firm's supplies.

The coolie couldn't see the justice of the verdict.

"I've only been convicted four times previously," he remarked.

Mr. Lewshitz and his wife landed in Shanghai, at the Whangpoo Wharf, and objected to the luggage coolies' charge of five cents each for fourteen pieces of baggage that contained their effects.

Then they hired some very independent workmen.

But the guild, or whatever it is that controls passengers' luggage at the wharfs, took a hand and got rough with the newcomers.

The travellers had one of the Chinese arrested.

Everything went well with the case until Mr. Lewshitz told the court:

"I'm a poor man and I think I should have compensation."

American Assessor Jacobs decreed:

"Coolie fined $5; no compensation."

Kaifeng News

(China Press Correspondence)

July 13.—The Civil Governor of Honan fled some days ago for parts unknown. He is an Anfu Club man and evidently became nervous.

The Tuchun, Chao Ti, is reported to be sitting on the fence, to see which way the issue turns. Numbers of officials are sending their families away, it is said.

A number of Wu Pei-fu's soldiers passed through last night, on their way to Houchowfu, at the junction of the Tsinpu and Lung Hai railway. This is a very important point if fighting comes.

Communication between here and Honanfu, and between Chengchow and the north on the Kinhan road is very uncertain now.

Bullfighting In Madrid Seems To Attract Fewer Women Than In Seville

Correspondent Gets Close View Of Joselito, Greatest Of Matadors Until Gored By 1,071st Animal, And Finds Him Far From Swaggering, Bloodthirsty Ideal

BY J. M. TUOHY

Madrid, May 12.—Somebody has said that you should judge a nation by its pastimes. If this standard be a true one, Spain must be taken as an exception.

It would be a grievous injustice to judge the Spaniard by his devotion to the bull ring. The Spaniard, as the visitor encounters him, is, before all, even-tempered, agreeable and good-natured. His patience is something to marvel at. He accepts gratuitous inconveniences and hardships with the self-abnegation of a saint.

A Spanish holiday crowd is the most docile and considerate to be met anywhere. There is a natural foundation of gentlemanliness in these people, whether high or low.

The Spaniard's craving for the gory horrors of the bullfight is therefore all the more of a paradox.

In Seville a few weeks ago the hotel waiter whispered in my ear: "Gallito, the greatest bull fighter in Spain, is coming to dine here this evening! You will see him!"

It was extremely interesting, but at the same time it was difficult to understand why the waiter should speak in such awe-stricken tones, as though it were some sort of sacrilege to mention even his name. Gallito, otherwise Joselito, had just returned from a South American tour of three months with some $200,000 to the good, and his hosts were a party of Argentineans who had crossed with him on the steamer.

NO SWAGGERING IDOL

He duly appeared, and anything more unlike one's idea of the swaggering, pampered, overbearing idol of the ladies and envy of the men it would be difficult to imagine. Of course he was dressed severely in black, the only glimpse of white being an almost clerical collar fastened in front by two black studs and no necktie.

He stood about seventy-one inches tall, with a perfectly formed figure, slim, lithe and very graceful. His dark hair was brushed straight from his forehead, his features were regular and somewhat delicate, his chin not particularly firm, but his eyes glittered with liveliness and good humor.

His gypsy origin was not betrayed by any swarthiness of skin. He was in his twenty-fifth year, but, like the people of his race, looked older.

Reputedly he already was a millionaire, but there certainly was none of the bumptiousness of the self-made man about him. In fact, he was distinctly unpretentious.

He was at the very zenith of his career—there were no further heights for him attain in his profession, or his science, or his art—which ever it may be, for it is described by the Spanish "fans" as all three.

He was a native of Seville—hailing from the gypsy quarter across the Guadalquivir—and had bought a splendid estanca (mansion) in the province, where he proposed to retire when he married his betrothed, a popular singer.

KILLED BY 1,071st BULL

He was killed instead, that day six weeks, in the bullring at Talavera, and the whole of Spain was cast into such mourning as has rarely been known there, even on the untimely death of a famous master of the bullring.

He had accepted an invitation from an amateur bull breeder to try a new type of animal he had produced on his stock farm, which he maintained would give particularly good sport.

Joselito went, stipulating that the proceeds should be given to a local charity.

The bulls are described as being particularly vicious, and didn't play the game according to the rules. They charged the unfortunate horses before their allotted time, and, instead of being beguiled into goring the red mantle, they showed a disposition to go for the man flaunting it tauntingly before them.

It was in this way Joselito was killed. A particularly fiery and difficult bull ignored the cloth and gored Joselito, who was waving it at him, preparing to give him the happy despatch with the sword. He had killed 1,070 bulls in his career and he was killed by his 1,071st.

It is idle to contend that there is no danger in bull fighting, but the danger is minimised to the utmost extent by the way the contest is carried on. The tactics of the ring are directed toward exhausting the bull before the espada—the Joselito or the Belmonte—comes forward to give him the happy despatch with his sword.

FASCINATING CEREMONY

The picturesqueness of the opening procession of the different grades of bullfighters into the ring in their gorgeous costumes and the ceremony of throwing in the key of the bull pen by the President of the occasion are fascinating.

Then the matadors dispose themselves round the ring waiting the appearance of the bull. At first they keep conveniently near the shelters placed inside the barricade. Then the massive gates of the dark bullpen are cast open and the bull is seen inside tossing his head and looking very savage.

Sometimes the bull doesn't want to go into the ring, but he is goaded out by somebody with a long pole behind him in the pen.

The finest moment of the game is when the bull, with a little rosette fastened in his mane with a sharp instrument, plunges into the arena, dazzled but furious, in the brilliant light.

The ring at Madrid must be 120 yards in diameter and seats between 25,000 and 30,000 people. The matadors with their red cloths don't come right out in the center at once and challenge the bull. They shake their cloths at a safe distance, and when the bull, finding himself, rushes at one of them, they all sprint for safety—if they can't gain the shelters they clear the barricade with magnificent agility.

These bull fighters are fine specimens of men, their every movement is graceful, and their nimbleness is their strong card.

At this time the bull is fresh, and they give him a wide berth, but when he has charged viciously a few times across the ring he begins to feel the strain.

WEARING CREATURE OUT

Then begins some very pretty play with the matadors, who venture into the ring, and, shaking their cloths, jump gracefully aside when he charges the cloth. All the time the bull is getting winded, but not the matadors, for when one matador has had a bout with him another takes him on, and the ill-fated animal is beguiled from one to the other—all the time wasting his strength vainly on the red cloths, and of course losing his temper sadly over his baffled efforts to get even with his tormentors.

When this process has gone on for some time a horn is blown, meaning that the next stage of the fight—so-called—is to begin. Three picadors have entered the ring, mounted on wretched screws of horses.

The picadors are heavily padded all over and wear steel leg coverings, each with a pole about 10 feet long with a barb on the end. It isn't a spearhead, which would make a clean wound.

The horses are blindfolded, but when they wind the bull they stop dead. One imagines the picador cantering around the ring on fiery steeds, alternately chasing and evading the bull, showing skill in horsemanship as well as daring. Nothing of the kind. There is no cantering, for these horses' cantering days are over. Instead of that they are literally dragged to the slaughter with revolting inhumanity.

When the bull is brought to a stand in a convenient position one of the horses is hauled forward by a ringman and the shivering animal, paralysed with terror, has to be prodded and shoved on as well.

The bull seems fascinated by the horse; he stands at gaze and, remarkably enough, he is not attracted even by the red coat of the man well within reach who is pulling the horse toward him. His whole attention is on the horse.

BULL TOSSES HORSE

The picador has his barbed pole ready and when the horse is dragged near enough to the bull he prods him with it in the shoulder. The bull then charges, buries his horns in the horse's stomach, hurls him over and the picador is thrown to the ground.

The bull's idea is to toss the horse and his rider, which would be very bad for the latter, but of course the weight of both combined is more than he can handle, especially after his bootless rushing around the ring, so they simply fall to the ground.

The picador is quickly extricated from the horse, the bull's whole mind meantime being on the horse, which is lying a gory mass in front of him, so that the picador runs no risk of being gored.

When the bull withdraws his horns, dripping with blood, from the horse's body he is distracted by the matadors, who again wave their red cloths at him. If the horse is able to rise he is assisted once more to his feet and the horrible sight of the helpless animal, which has never emitted a sound during this act of cold-blooded butchery, standing quaking with fear and agony, his entrails hanging to the ground, is presented to the spectator.

ONLY HUMANE FEATURE

If he is too hideously wounded to be dragged up again, a ringman comes forward with a dagger, drives it into his spinal marrow, wriggles it around, and the horse, giving a few kicks, expires. This is the only humane feature of the whole bullfighting business.

When the bull gores the defenseless horse a strange murmur goes around the ring, as though of satisfaction. Sometimes the horse gets only a glancing blow if he gibs when being presented to the bull, and in that case he is up and put through the frightful ordeal a second time, when he never escapes. Three horses are usually disposed of in this way by each bull. It is all part of the process of exhausting the bull for espada.

The bull, further worn out by his useless efforts to toss the horse and his rider, is now played again by the matadors, who get more and more daring as the show proceeds and the bull's movements grow slower.

One matador at the Madrid bull ring on Easter Sunday actually slipped on his cloak within a few feet of the bull as the latter was making for him at full tilt, but the man was up and away like a flash of lightning.

SEEMS MOST DANGEROUS

Now the horn is sounded again, and the banderilleros appear in the ring armed with darts with barbed ends like the picador's lance.

Although the bull is now getting more or less spent, this work of the banderilleros seems the most daring and dangerous of the whole performance. The banderillero stands in front of the bull, about twenty to forty yards away, in one of the latter's increasingly frequent pauses, holding in each hand a dart with a colored shaft about two feet long which he points at the bull.

Often the animal doesn't come on and the banderillero provokes him by making curious noises.

When the bull charges, the banderillo waits a breathless moment, the darts poised in his hands, and when the bull gets close enough he plunges them into his neck or shoulders and jumps aside to avoid the deadly thrust of the animal's horns.

This is a risky act, for the banderillero gets nearer to the bull than the matador and has no red cloth to divert his attention.

The darts, properly employed, remain dangling in the bull's neck and before this part of the performance is over the animal often carries eight of them, with their points working around in each separate wound, the blood streaming from them all.

The bull is now further maddened by his wounds, but his strength is waning, his rushes are shorter and shorter and the matadors take greater risks, to the delight of the crowd.

Again the horn is blown and the final act begins. The espada, who has been in the ring throughout the performance, occasionally taking his part with the matadors, comes forward with his long, dagger-like sword under a red cloth. The lesser performers stand aside, and the master fighter proceeds to play the bull. Finally he goes quite close to the animal, now dazed with pain and exhaustion, and as the bull stands head down meditating a charge, the espada jumps forward and drives his sword as near as possible to the vital point in the neck with an oblique direction to the heart.

If the thrust is well and truly made the sword goes home, the bull staggers to its knees and falls over dead.

Out of five bulls I saw despatched in the bull ring at Madrid on Easter Sunday only one was killed outright by the sword thrust, two others charged with the sword buried in their necks and one espada had five tries before he drove the bull to its knees.

The espada who kills his bull cleanly gets an ovation, while the bungler is jeered. The espada who despatched his bull in one thrust had to trot around the ring, hat in hand, bowing acknowledgment to the enthusiasms of the audience, some of whom threw him their caps, their cigarette cases and offered other more or less valuable testimony of their admiration.

The body of the bull is hauled out of the ring by six gayly caparisoned mules at a gallop, those of the horses follow, ringmen with baskets of sand cover up the sanguinary traces of the encounter and the death sentence is pronounced on another bull and two or three horses, by the renewed sounding of the President's horn for the release of another condemned victim.

BALD FACTS OF THE CASE

This is the plain English of bull-fighting, which no amount of skill or daring on the part of the men engaged can make otherwise than a revolting spectacle of cruelty. The bull never has a chance—he may fight like a tiger, but he is always killed in the end, whereas the men come off scot-free except in very rare cases. The miserable horses are subjected to the vilest barbarity, apparently in the interest of mere bloodshedding. If the horses were eliminated the display would be less horrid, but it could never be called sport in any circumstances.

The bull-fighting in vogue since the eighteenth century really represents a degraded form of the original method, when it was conducted by amateurs on horseback, who killed the bull with their lances—a very risky business.

But bull-fighting since then has become professionalised, and has deteriorated to the inhuman display of today.

Each espada provides his own cuadrilla (company) of matadors, picadores and banderilleros, and while one lot are performing the others make a brilliant show standing behind the barricade in the passage that runs around in front of the first tier of seats. There are usually three espadas at each fight, each accounting for two bulls in the course of the afternoon.

FEW WOMEN IN MADRID RING

It must be said that there were few women in the vast amphitheater of seats at Madrid. Bull-fighting is popular with women in Andalusia, but apparently not so in Madrid.

A refined looking Spanish girl of about eighteen was seated next to me, brought by her father, but she looked horrified at the spectacle and turned away her head when the ghastly business of the picadors began.

It is said that the English-born Queen of Spain has come to relish these national shows, though at first she was suspected of having the lenses of her opera glass darkened to shut out the horrors of the arena.

AMERICANS IN KIEV GET SAFELY AWAY

Turn Automobiles Over To Polish Staff For Use In Feeding Refugees

COSSACKS ATTACK TRAINS

General Rydzmigly, With His Bride of Six Weeks, Last To Leave Beleagured City

Warsaw, June 16, (Associated Press).—Americans took a prominent part in the evacuation of Kiev. They turned their automobiles over to the Polish staff for use in feeding refugees, aiding wounded soldiers and burying dead where there had been fights between Poles and Bolshevist raiding parties. These raids were designed to cut communication over the ground which the Americans would have to travel in coming out of Kiev under the protection of the Polish Army.

The Americans arrived in Warsaw today after six days and nights in a captured Bolshevist box car. When the Americans departed from Kiev on the afternoon at June 10 there were at least six scattered fires burning in the city. The Bolsheviki were shelling Kiev and aviators were dropping incendiary bombs.

Just prior to the evacuation Kiev's waterworks went out of commission and the electric and gas plants stopped working. The city's population was in a terrible state of confusion and thousands were eager to depart, but were prevented owing to lack of transportation.

It is estimated that 6,000 refugees left on trains Thursday under the protection of the Poles. Travel by other means was not permitted because of the infantry raids by the Bolsheviki to the west and southwest.

AMERICANS WHO ESCAPED

The Americans who came out, in addition to the Red Cross and other welfare workers, included Dr. E. Dana Durand, former Director of the Census, who is food adviser to the Polish Government; Charles Gaskill of Philadelphia of the American Railroad Mission; Colonel Henry Shaw, U. S. A., liaison officer of the Red Cross League; Dr. Henry Plots of the New York City Joint Distribution Committee, and John Gregg of Portland, Ore., of the American Relief Association.

Two American automobiles filled with Polish staff officers headed the procession when the exacuation of Kiev began. They were loaned by representatives of the American Relief Association and the American Railroad Mission to Poland. A representative of the Railroad Mission estimated today that a procession of vehicles of all kinds was strung along the highways for a distance of 25 miles.

Near the rear were an officer and a woman on horseback followed by a detachment of soldiers. The officer was General Rydzmigly, the Polish commander at Kiev, who was accompanied by his bride of six weeks. She accompanied the General when Kiev slipped from the hands of the Bolsheviki. General Rydzmigly, who from every side, was the very last to leave the city.

Nine trains departed to the northwest on the Malin line. The trains were convoyed by armored trains ahead and also in the rear. Along the highway were refugees and parts of Kiev's Polish-Ukrainian garrison. On either side of the trains marched soldiers. The Americans, refugees and soldiers were all cautioned to remain within the convoy for self protection.

Travel necessarily was slow, keeping pace with the infantry. Frequently the armored trains and infantry literally fought their way out when attacked by raiding parties.

Many Poles remained in Kiev, as it was impossible to evacuate them. The Americans heard the evacution order while at dinner in the Continental Hotel. The orchestra was playing, and some few of them wore evening clothes. The evacuation started at daylight.

Mails To Peking Going By Steamer

The Commissioner of Chinese Posts in Shanghai advises that they have been sending mails to Peking and Tientsin by steamer, as communication on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway has been interrupted owing to the internal strife.

The railway line is however open up to Tsinanfu, and therefore mails can be sent there by rail. Heavy mails and parcels for northern posts are sent by steamer.

FIGHT OVER LOANS IS LIKELY AT SPA

Other Allies To Demand British Concessions Like Those To France

London, May 28.—Sparring preliminary to the Spa conference has been going on between Britain and France ever since Lloyd George and Millerand met at Hythe, and now the other Allies interested in the decisions to be reached at the Belgian Summer resort are jumping into the ring, while Germany on her side is emphasising her financial weakness by spreading stories of her prospective internal troubles.

Italy has entered a protest against not receiving equal preferential treatment in regard both to indemnification by Germany and repayment of her indebtedness to Great Britain and Servia, and Rumania are going to follow suit.

The pivotal fact in the whole situation is that the British view of what Germany can pay and the French, Italian and other demands as to what Germany must be made to pay seem irreconcilable, and the upshot apparently will be that Great Britain will be asked to forego her claims upon her allies for money lent in proportion as Germany fails to pay the mohey they will vote to have awarded under whatever settlement is reached at Spa.

Sir Auckland Geddes has spoken of Great Britain's attitude in regard to her own indebtedness to America, and The Westminster Gazette remarks tonight:

"We in the meantime have to pay the United States what we borrowed on behalf of these countries from her, and unless she is willing to share the burden, which at present seems unlikely, we shall not ask or expect relief from her."

There are difficulties looming ahead also in respect to the claims which France and other Continental countries are making for immediate relief in ready money for urgent necessities like the restoration of devastated districts. This ready money can be got only by raising a loan on the security of the prospective German indemnity. Such a loan must be international, which means in practice that it must be backed by Great Britain, and in the event of America declining to take any responsibility—a contingency which has to be considered—the proposal would amount to this: that Great Britain must not only be prepared to wipe off the old debts due from her allies but incur new liabilities contingent upon Germany failing to meet the payments which under the loan she would be guaranteed to make.

The Continental argument in favor of a loan urge upon Great Britain the necessity of inducing the United States to take a hand in guaranteeing it; but the view in London is that, however useful and desirable such participation would be, America must be left to decide for herself, and that Great Britain cannot undertake the task of persuasion.

Premier Lloyd George and the other British delegates to Spa are in the parlance of the ringside, already training for the coming fight, which promises to be a fierce one, if one may judge from Poincare's resignation after the Hythe conference and the re-entry on the scene of Clemenceau and the press campaign which has now begun in Italy.

War Notes From Chinese Papers

A second Presidential mandate, ordering the suspension of hostilities between the Anfu and the Chihli factions, has been issued.

General Chu Tung-fang, in command of the first division of the Frontier Defense Army, which surrendered to General Wu Pei-fu on Saturday, has been arrested and sent to Paotingfu for trial.

The price of rice in Peking has soared to $20 per picul.

General Chen Wen-yung, commander of the third division of the Frontier Denfense Army, has been seriously wounded.

The two brigade commanders of the 15th division, formerly under General Feng Kuo-chang, Chang and Hsia, have been captured by the Chihli troops.

Three Japanese officers were captured by General Wu Pei-fu when Chihli forces occupied Chochow. They are being detained as prisoners of war.

The 27th division of the Fengtien troops is marching against Ma Liang of Tsinanfu, who is attempting to re-capture the Tehchow Arsenal, after its being taken by General Shan Tehchuan.

Tuchun Yen Hsi-shan of Shansi has denied all reports of his having cast in his lot with the Anfuites. He says he will maintain strict neutrality in the present conflict.

The Anfu Army suffered over 2,000 casualties in its engagement with the Chihlities at Sunlingtien.

The victorious army of Wu Pei-fu is now in Changhsintien after capturing Chochow.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been taken as read, the reports and accounts as presented were passed unanimously, a vote of thanks being accorded to Mr. L. Bertes for his excellent work during the past season.

MEETING ADJOURNS

The question of the organisation of the body, which is based on individual membership at present, was brought up and the proposal made that the present constitution be altered, so that henceforward membership be vested in clubs only, not in individuals. After a prolonged discussion centering round this resolution, it was decided to adjourn the meeting until next Friday at 5:30 p.m., so as to enable delegates from the three principal clubs actively interested in natation, viz. the Rowing Club, the International Swimming Club and the Police Recreation Club to sound the views of their respective bodies on this matter.

THE REPORT

The following is the report and copy of the accounts presented at the meeting:

The Committee have the pleasure in submitting the following account of the Association's affairs during 1919-20.

Membership.—The total membership at the end of June, 1920 was 23, or 28 less than last year.

Hawaiian Swimmers For American Olympic Team

Duke Kahanamoku

Harold Kruger

The great water carnival recently held in Honolulu gave evidence that Hawaiians were not wrong in predicting that three of the island swimmers at least would represent Uncle Sam in the swimming events at Antwerp this Summer.

The performances of Duke Kahanamoku, Harold Kruger and Warren Kealcha seem to assure them a place on the American team.

Kahanamoku romped away with the classic 100-yards sprint in 54-2/5 seconds, the fastest time made for the distance this season.

Kealoha won the 100-yard backstroke in 1 minute and 8 seconds, cliping one-fifth of a second from the world's record.

Kruger although he was defeated by Kealoha in the back stroke hundred, is a consistent performer at the distance and will also be a strong man in the middle distances.

If you were interested in selling goods to the people of Greenland, you wouldn't place your advertising in a newspaper or magazine that was published in Switzerland and was read only by the people of Switzerland. The same argument applies to China. Your business and your investments are located in China. You are interested primarily in selling your merchandise to the people of China, hence your advertising should be placed in a publication published in China and read by the Chinese people. If you are interested in selling in Japan, Siberia, America, or Timbuctoo, then by all means the advertising should be placed in publications published and read in those places.

ALLIES' PLAN TO INVADE RUSSIA

Matin, Attacking Turkish Treaty, Publishes Alleged Order Of Clemenceau

GRAND VIZIER IN PARIS

British Willing To Allow Changes In Near Eastern Settlement—French Opposition

BY EDWIN L. JAMES

Paris, June 17.—That in October, 1918, allied troops under command of General Franchet d'Esperey were on their way to Vienna in a successful campaign when, upon orders of Premier Clemenceau, they were stopped and General d'Esperey was ordered to prepare for a campaign in Southern Russia to overthrow the Bolsheviki, is the sensational story printed by the Matin today.

This disclosure is the first of a number which will be made in an effort to show that France has not got her just dues out of the Turkish Treaty. Its publication coincides with the arrival in Paris today of the Turkish peace delegation headed by Grand Vizier Ferid Pasha, loaded down with demands for changes in the treaty.

The French Foreign Office does not yet confirm the London report that the treaty will be redrafted. It would doubtless be delighted to do so, and very probably will when the stage is fully set.

The Matin says that Clemenceau never could see the importance of Turkey in the war settlement. It recalls that as a journalist he opposed the allied efforts in Turkey and when he became Premier he remained consistent in not pushing it.

Presenting documentary evidence supplied by Paul Banaset, Reporter General of the war budget during the war and now Deputy, the Matin says that in October d'Esperey had all his divisions—French, English and Italian—directed toward Vienna. The Italians, on the left, were to go to Munich. Mackensen had been beaten and d'Esperey believed nothing could halt him.

"It would have been grand could the French General have marched into Vienna as Napoleon did under similar conditions," says Benaret. It would have been magnificent. It was a great plan."

The Matin says that when he was gaining victory after victory and nothing could have stopped him, General d'Esperey received from Paris on October 8 orders to halt and to send his right wing, under command of a British General, against Constantinople.

CLEMENCEAU'S ORDER

On October 27, the Matin says, d'Esperey received the following letter ordering him to prepare for a Russian expedition instead of marching on Vienna:

"The President of the Council and Minister of War to Monsieur, the General commanding the allied armies of the Orient, Saloniki:

"I have the honor to send you enclosed a copy of a letter exposing the main lines of the plan of action which is to be adopted in Russia, not only to pursue the fight against the Central Powers but to realise the economic encircling of Bolshevism and to provoke its fall.

"It is a question of a project corresponding to the views of the French Government and the realisation of which makes necessary an accord of the interested powers of the Entente.

"This accord once established, the allied intervention in Southern Russia forecast in this plan of action will constitute a natural prolonging of the operations confided to the armies of the Orient. The progressive development of this intervention will depend on possibilities which will be opened by our intervention in Rumania and when imminent capitulation of Turkey will permit us to reach the region of Odessa by way of the Black Sea.

"It is on the lines thus traced that I ask you from now on to study with General Berthelot the conditions of the execution of this eventual action in southern Russia. I will be obliged if you will send me as soon as possible the results of this study.

"In order to orientate you more completely upon the different angles of interallied action in Russia, I join to the present note a copy of the collective note No. 38 of the permanent military representatives attached to the Superior War Council, a note which exposes in its main lines the conditions under which the efforts already undertaken in the northeast and southeast of Russia ought to be developed.

"This collective note has already received the agreement of the Italian Government and of the French Government. It is at present submitted to the examination of the British Government.

(Signed) "CLEMENCEAU."

Thus in the internal French political fight the curtain is lifted hiding a great war plan which was never executed. The Austrian surrender, the German surrender and other factors came along and changed the plan.

The Matin promises that this is only the first of its disclosures on the mistakes which it says have cost France so dearly.

ATTACK MILLERAND

The French demand for revision of the Turkish treaty is growing daily. It has grown so that it now appears it might be impossible to get the Chamber to ratify the document as it stands. Former Premier Briand, the greatest power in French politics, has taken charge of the fight for what he terms French interests and has had appointed a Parliamentary commission of inquiry into Premier Millerand's Oriental policy. The question is being asked whether Millerand could gain a vote of confidence should he place the Turkish treaty before the Chamber for ratification.

The importance which has been attached to the Turkish treaty arises from two sources, first the growth of opposition to Millerand led by Briand and Poincare, who charge he is not making France the leader of Europe, and second the perfectly honest belief on the part of a large section of the French public that the treaty is not good because it is unworkable and because it sacrifices France's interests to the benefit of England.

The resignation of Poincare from the Presidency of the commission on reparations marked the beginning of the growth of the Millerand opposition. Disappointment over plans for the proposed international loan, disapproval of Lloyd George's Russian tentatives and the general prospects for results from the Spa conference had led to a feeling of dissatisfaction with Premier Millerand in certain quarters of the Chamber. The campaign over the Mosul question started by Briand has accentuated this feeling.

In 1918, when he was Premier, Briand negotiated an agreement with England by which the Mosul oil fields were to go to France. They have gone to England. Briand charges that Millerand sacrificed something he had gained for France. Millerand's friends say that Clemenceau had promised Mosul to Lloyd George, whereupon Tardieu, speaking for Clemenceau, alleges he did not conclude any such bargain.

The occasion has been seized by critics of the Government to emphasise what England has gained in Turkey as compared with what France has got. Constantinople is called "a British port" and England generally is referred to as the boss of Turkey. It may thus be seen that if Briand and his lieutenants judge that the time has come to oust Millerand they have good political material in the Turkish treaty.

But it would be far from just to charge to internal politics the motives of all opposition to the Turkish treaty. The Turkish treaty represents the prevalence of the British idea over the French idea in Turkey. The French idea was to make terms with the Nationalists and thus try to establish friendly relations with the powers the French diplomats believed months ago were the strongest in Turkey. The British on the other hand advocated defying the Nationalists and by taking a close hold upon the Sultan's government force it to accept the Allies' terms. The treaty has been drawn up and it is very evident that the Sultan's signature can be had. But the French argue it is not worth while getting it because Mustapha Kemal, leader of the Nationalists, and not the Sultan is the ruler of Turkey and Mustapha swears he will never accept the dismemberment of Turkey as laid down in the treaty.

And so a great part of French opinion believes that inasmuch as the Allies are not ready to start a new war to conquer Turkey, the best thing to do is to make the treaty acceptable to Mustapha Kemal.

And there arises an interesting point. To make the treaty acceptable to Kemal would mean leaving the Mosul and other territories to Turkey. Now the French have been advocates of dealing with the Nationalists, and with the Nationalists in control of Mosul they would stand to get more out of the oil fields, they may believe, than if England had them and France got only twenty-five percent of the petroleum which a private agreement with Lloyd George would give her.

It may be remarked that English and French take reverse positions on Turkey and Russia. England would deal with the Soviets because the Soviets are the only power in Russia, but France will not. France would deal with the Turkish Nationalists as the only substantial power in Turkey. The English don't approve of the Nationalists and won't treat with them.

PREDICTS NEW WAR

The French newspapers every day emphasise the troubles in Turkey—fights between Greeks and Turks in Thrace, the success of Kemal in holding all the important parts of Anatolia, threats of Nationalists against Greek lines outside of Smyrna, the plight of Armenia, the opposition of the British in Mesopotamia, French fights with Turks in Syria—and they ask what it is all about and why keep it up since England is getting the lion's share.

The Temps of yesterday says: "If things keep on going as they are, we are going to have a new war. It will begin in Thrace, where 50,000 Turks are confronting the Greeks. It would be difficult to tell where this war would go. It is about time we did something to change the direction of things."

COLLEGIANS TO LENGTHEN STAY

Two Performances Added; One Of Which, Saturday Night, To Be Request Program

Sumner N. Mering, who will act as one of the end-men in the University of California Glee Club Minstrels at the Olympic Theater.

Popular demand yesterday brought an announcement from the management of the University of California Glee Club that the engagement of the collegians at the Olympic Theater would be extended to include Friday and Saturday nights.

As a grand farewell show, the Blue-and-Gold entertainers will stage a "request night" Saturday. The entire program for the evening will be picked from requests made by prospective members of the audience. Blanks upon which requests may be made can be obtained at the Olympic Theater, at the Astor House, and at other places which will be announced later.

The program for Friday night has not yet been decided, but it will probably include a sparring exhibition between Violinist Dave Phennig and a local boxer.

REGULARS AGAIN WIN FROM REDS

Game Marked By Appearance Of Brand New Star In Pitching Firmament

The Regulars are at it again, walloping the Reds yesterday 6 to 4. It was a regular man-size contest too, both sides playing in good form right up to the finish.

A new pitching star has appeared in the baseball firmament. Young Terry who has been hiding his light, or rather his pitching ability, under a bushel has at last been uncovered. He had a poor day yesterday only fanning ten men. The runs scored off his heaving were more in the nature of gifts. He was particularly stingy with his hits, allowing the Reds but four.

The Trotsky men scored three runs in the first inning, due to loose playing by the homesiders, but were unable to do more than add another counter in the sixth which was presented to them via the error route.

ONE IN FIRST

The Regulars scored one run in the first and three in the third adding one more in each of the last two innings. Cy Wilhoit with his three-bagger scored one ahead of him and Skipper Bills with his wicked drive to deep center for a through ticket, carried off the clubbing honors. Merrill who was on the mound for the Anarchists, pitched a fairly good game but was off a little on his control.

The Varsity boys were out for an early morning workout and the charley horses ceased to exist after their strenuous work. It will be an entirely different team that faces the hope of Shanghai next Friday.

GILL'S LAST GAME

Gill will go to the mound again to pitch what will be his farewell game as he sails for home next Sunday. Sammy Woods will be lost to the team also as he is leaving Thursday for the North. With plenty of good material left [illegible] up. The usual Regulars versus Bolsheviki game will be played Thursday.

Friday afternoon at five o'clock will witness the battle between the Collegians and the home gang. Pop Guernsey and Doctor Clapp will act as the arbitraters as usual.

Sir Philip Sassoon Is Most Eligible British Bachelor

Wearer Of Many Military Decorations; Of Ancient Lineage And Marked For Peerage, Has Fortune Estimated At About $20,000,000

London, June 12.—The name of Sir Philip Sassoon, already familiar in England, has become known to every one who studies world politics. For Prime Minister Lloyd George and Premier Millerand held conferences recently at Sir Philip's new country residence, Belcaire, at Lympne, Kent, and discussed momentous subjects.

The choice of Belcaire for their meeting place is explained easily. For Sir Philip, who has many friends in New York, which city he visited some eight years ago, is the Prime Minister's Parliamentary private secretary. Besides, Belcaire is as quiet as luxurious and, being near the Channel, the atmosphere in which it lies is delightfully invigorating.

Sir Philip's ability, charm of manner, social position and wealth make him an ideal private secretary. During the war he was on Field Marshal Haig's staff as private secretary. Incidentally, he was decorated with the Legion of Honor and with pretty much all the British military orders short of the Victoria Cross.

A PRINCE OF ISRAEL

He might well be called a Prince of Israel, for he is descended from an ancient Jewish family. One of his ancestors of modern days, his great-grandfather, David Sassoon, a merchant and banker of Bombay, was born in 1793 at Bagdad and was naturalised at Bombay. His second wife was Farha, daughter of Furraf Hyeem of Bagdad, a fact sufficient to prove the Oriental tinge in the Sassoon blood. David's son, Albert Abdullah David Sassoon, was the first Baronet of his line and Sir Philip is the first Jew to hold a baronetcy as the third in succession.

Sassoon is one of the most eligible bachelors in Great Britain. He inherited a fortune estimated at $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 from his father, Sir Edward Albert Sassoon, and from his mother, who was Alice Caroline, daughter of Baron Gustave de Rothschild. He succeeded his father as Unionist member of Parliament for Hythe, the nearest town to Lympne, which, it may be stated, is pronounced Lim. Sir Philip was then the youngest member, being only twenty-three.

GREAT BUSINESS INTERESTS

He succeeded his father too in the control and direction of the entire British telegraph system in Asia and Northern Africa. He is a member of the firm of E. D. Sassoon & Co., merchants and bankers, of India, China and London.

He has never shown in his public career any great political talent, his real bent being artistic. But he has been a generous subscriber to Lloyd George's fund. It is understood that he is marked for a Ministerial position and ultimately a peerage.

Besides Belcaire, he has an estate at Trent Park, Herts., and a splendid town house at No. 25 Park Lane which contains some remarkable pictures, antiques and objects of art, of which he is a discriminating collector.

He is this sort of a host: After a dinner to ninety guests in his Park Lane residence, Granville Barker produced "The Death of Tintagiles," by Maeterlinck.

Philip's only sister, Sybil, married Lord Rocksavage, son and heir of the Marquis of Cholmondeley.

Apart from politics, Sir Philip's chief interest is in open-air sports. He is a keen polo-player and has often played the game with the King of Spain. At St. Moritz Sir Philip distinguished himself as a skater. He bought an aeroplane last year and has flown frequently between London and Lympne.

Standard Styles For Women To Cut Cost Of Living

Cleveland, Ohio, June 1.—That the Government is seeking the elimination of extreme and freak styles in women's wearing apparel as a means of lowering the cost of clothing, was revealed today by J. G. Weatherly of Washington, Special Assistant of Attorney General Palmer, in conference here today with members of the Cleveland Garment Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. Weatherly, in direct charge of all fair price commissions in the country, gave emphasis to this point, stating that the discontinuance of extreme and freak styles would be as great a factor as any other in reducing the cost of women's garments. Weatherly is to place style standardization before garment manufacturers in other parts of the country, and requested the co-operation of Cleveland manufacturers who have developed standards along this line.

Twenty Leading Drygood Merchants On Seven Weeks Tour Of The States

San Francisco, June 15.—With twenty of Great Britain's foremost drygoods merchants in attendance, the joint convention of the National and the California Retail Dry Goods Associations was held recently in San Francisco.

The convention, which was in session for three days in the Palace Hotel, attracted widespread attention. It was opened by Mayor James Rolph, and addresses were made by George O. Boardman, vice president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, Marshall Hale; Lew Hahn, managing director of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, and C. L. Miehl, of the United States Treasury Department.

The speakers at a banquet on the second day included Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker, who has just returned from the Orient, and Governor Stephens of California. Marshall Hale was toastmaster.

The delegation of British drapers to the convention was headed by F. W. Cook of the Drapers Chamber of Trade of the United Kingdom. Miss Dorothy Cook, his daughter accompanied the party, which has been on a seven weeks' tour of the United States, having left England April 28.

A committee headed by Robert Roos met the British drapers at the Oakland mole upon their arrival. They have been extensively entertained, trips to the California and Stanford universities and the country clubs being included in the sightseeing tours arranged for them. The San Francisco newspapers have paid much attention to the British visitors, and have interviewed them at length on post-war conditions in Great Britain.

AMERICAN AIRMEN ESCAPE CAPTURE

Cooper And Crawford, Their Planes Disabled, Fight Cossacks With Machine Guns

AIRDROME IS CAPTURED

Red Cross Workers Elude Budenny's Raiders And Reach Safety With Poles

Warsaw, June 14 (Associated Press).—The Americans who were in the Kiev region, over which the Bolsheviki have swept in their westward drive, have all safely emerged from that sector, according to word from the front, but several of them had narrow escapes.

Two aviators of the Kosciuszko Squadron, the air force of American volunteers which operates with the Poles, were chased by the Bolsheviki after their airplanes had been lost. The airmen were Lieut. George Crawford of Wilmington, Del., and Capt. Merion Cooper of Jacksonville, Fla. They made an emergency landing in a field, where they were discovered by General Budenny's raiding Soviet cavalry. The airmen used their machine guns on the approaching Cossacks, but finally realising that their fight was a hopeless one they set fire to their airplanes, ran for the woods, and escaped.

The Bolsheviki have overrun the region in which the airdrome of the Kosciuszko Squadron was situated. Some of the Americans' material was captured by the Soviet troops.

The headquarters here of the American Red Cross received a message today from Major Bruce M. Mohler of the contingent in the region to the East, announcing that all the Red Cross workers had got out of the territory occupied by the advancing Bolsheviki.

Colonel Moffat of the Red Cross, who was on his way to Jitomir for the purpose of obtaining some documents deposited there, arrived in the town the day after the Budenny raid. The burned depot was still smoldering when he reached the edge of the town. He reports seeing the bodies of four Poles swinging from ropes. They had been hanged by Budenny's men. Nearby were Bolsheviki who had been strung up when the Cossacks were ousted.

It was on this same day that the evacuation of Kiev by the Poles was begun. There was great confusion, the railroads all having been cut at various places by Budenny's forces. Colonel Moffat made an attempt to return to Kiev, but the Budenny raiders, it was found, had penetrated both west and north of Jitomir, causing the Poles to bring up infantry and armored trains to deal with them. Several British observers arrived at this time and the Poles undertook to protect the party. The armored trains which they eventually succeeded in getting through rescued Colonel Moffat and the British observers.

The party was shot at from all sides as the train passed through the wooded districts where the Poles and Bolsheviki were fighting, the Polish engineers repairing the roads while the infantry fought off the enemy.

An unconfirmed report has been received by the Poles here that the Bolsheviki captured four Polish Red Cross young women workers in the Kiev region and are holding them as hostages.

Picturesque warfare, strikingly similar to that of the days when the cavalier was supreme, is being carried on in the wild districts southwest of Kiev. It is chiefly a combat between Polish lancers and Bolshevist Cossacks.

Raids by the troops of General Budenny to break the right wing of the Poles protecting the Kiev communications began several weeks ago. Budenny, who was a General in the old Russian forces, has been using old and new tactics in everlasting wearing and hammering drives. His cavalry is well reinforced by infantry.

Kiev is now in Bolshevist hands, but the Poles say it is perhaps not lost forever and the front swings back and forth from day to day.

This front, if it may be called such, is partly unsettled wooded country and partly devastated farmland, where sometimes a single company tries to hold a line from one to two miles long. Budenny's cavalry consists entirely of crack men, and it is said each must have served at least two years in the old Russian mounted forces. Against the Cossacks are Polish lancers, well known in history, and Polish cavalry that covered seventy miles in two days early in May during the drive against Kiev. Carbines are used chiefly by Budenny's men, but in the frequent close-up fighting of horsemen against horsemen the Cossacks bring their sabres into play and the lancers use their side-arms.

Returning Americans say that the leader or Captain of Budenny's detachments wears a red shirt and leads the cavalry charge, followed closely by Lieutenants wearing white shirts. Then come the drove of Budenny's men wearing shirts of all colors with the exception of red or white. As far as is known Buddeny himself is close by.

Catalogued for sale—2,471,461 lbs. (about 1,103 tons).

Sold—1,368,211 lbs. (about 610 tons).

There has been an all-round drop in prices since last week on account of news from the consuming markets of a sudden fall in values. Several large buyers were operating at the auctions this week, however, and a fair amount of business was put through by those sellers who were willing to meet the market at the reduced prices.

Standard Ribbed Smoked Sheet realised up to 72 cents, 2 lots changing hands at 72½, showing a decline of 9½ cents on the week. There was not very much of this grade on offer, and parcels were readily taken up by "bears" covering short sales. Good F.A.Q. Sheet met with a good demand from the trade, but it was not easy to find buyers of Off Quality Sheet.

Standard 1st Latex Crepe sold on a par with Sheet, 2 lots realising 72 cents, and one lot reaching 73½, showing a decline of 10 cents on the week.

Fine Brown and Dark Crepes met with rather a poor demand and sold at a discount of about 7 cents on the week, whereas Bark and Earthy Crepes realised only about 1 cent under last week's prices.

At the continuation this morning, there was no change in prices, but the tone of the market was quieter, with only a few buyers operating.

The Quaints

R. B. Salisbury and his Quaints arrive here this morning and will open at the Lyceum Theater tonight. Playgoers will remember them and anticipate a real good show. Since they were here last all the men folk have been entertaining the Hun, but they did not succeed in pleasing the audience on that occasion. Since the rattle of shots ceased, however, the merry band have had wonderful seasons at more than one London house, and both the King and Queen have enjoyed the whimsicalities of the Quaints at a command performance.

On their way here they have met with the greatest appreciation at all the ports of call. At Hongkong, the company only was able to put in one night, but they played to a capacity house with the best results. In Calcutta the Statesman stated: "The best all-round musical program seen at the Empire for a long time." Salisbury knows the East and the kind of stuff we like, and so he is bringing a troupe of players who are all in the first class.

Tuan Capitulates

FIELD Marshal Tuan Chi-jui has wasted no time in bowing to the inevitable. The cards have turned against him, and quickly realising his precarious position, this strange and sinister character, who has saved the country from being turned back to a monarchy on at least two occasions and who has, for political variety, on other occasions driven President, Cabinet and Parliament from Peking, this opium-smoking, chess-playing Old Man of the Sea has capitulated. He has resigned all titles and offices. Military Dictator, besieging the palace of the President one day, the next he is overthrown and a peace delegation appointed by the President has made its way through his lines to plead with the Chihli group to accept the terms and thus end the warfare.

The terms are more favorable to the Chihli group than could have been expected at so early a date, yet we doubt if they will prove to be immediately acceptable. That would not be the Chinese way. Tsao Kun declared just before hostilities were opened that he wanted the heads of Tuan and Little Hsu sent out to him and would be satisfied with nothing less. And he added that if he failed he would send in his own and Wu Pei-fu's heads, although how he intended to accomplish this feat we must leave to the reader's imagination.

The peace terms offered by Marshal Tuan are as follows:

(1) Punishment of Little Hsu for disobeying the President's mandate.

(2) Discharge of all of Tuan's troops.

(3) Dismissal of the second Parliament, the one now holding forth in Peking.

(4) Dismissal of the three Anfu Cabinet Ministers.

(5) Suppression of the Anfu Club.

Marshal Tuan doesn't seem to have been able to think up any punishment for himself. The Japanese apparently have abandoned him and he in turn has abandoned his chief lieutenant, Little Hsu, but he has not as yet abandoned himself. It may be, of course, that out of consideration for the Chihli conquerors, he is refraining from expressing any view as to what ought to be done to him, leaving that delicate matter to them and meanwhile taking refuge, as Chang Hsun did not so long ago when his attempt to restore the Baby Emperor failed, in the Legation Quarter, the haven of overthrown tyrants.

LINES FROM LETTERS

Dear Mutt: There is a lot of money in Shanghai but every body signs chits and one never sees any of it. There is a great deal of talk about the H. C. L. in the papers. At first I thought it meant Harding, Cox and Lansing. It doesn't; it means that everyone is asking more for what they have to sell. A beer, that we use to get in the days that are gone for a nickle, costs fifty cents at the place I am perspiring. You have to pay a dollar to see Dug Fairbanks or Our Mary.

But Mutt, what do you think? If you manage to find a house, you first have to pay a premium; then take over all the furniture at a price that was never paid for it; and when you at last move in, the landlord moves in, too, and tells you the rent has been raised 100 percent. It's a great place. I've got here, but how to get home again—ask me? Now all the shipping companies are getting the idea. All the fares are unfair. But Mutt this is the life.

There are a lot of English people here and I have been talking to them, so cheerio, old bean, what! More later.

BUT IT'S WORTH IT

Dear Domino: Who was the happy who sang:

"The 'High Cost of Living' is only a joke,
It's 'The High Cost of Loving' that's keeping me broke."

I'll tell the world that any Shanghai lover can sing that song every day. What with calling for the Object of you. Affections with a motor ($4 per hour) to take her to a show (at $3 per seat) and then a simple little bite and a few dances hyphenated with cool drinks, (to the tune of $10 or so more) until you roll home in another motor (still $4 per hour) it sure does keep a fellow busy signing chits. The next morning the wise one won't forget a box of bon bons, so as to remind her of his existence while business keeps you scratching for the wherewithal for another evening, and so it goes. Ah yes, 'tis love that makes the world go broke!

Yours feelingly,

"DEEKS BREASTS THE TAPE"

The shadows of evening were falling, and the weary cricketers wended their way from the home of the Recs to the S. C. C. pavilion. They had not been playing cricket. One side did not turn up, and so they played tennis instead. While fighting their sets over again to the tinkle of glasses and crushing of ice, Deeks, the master of Shakespearean epithets, said he could run. One of the party challenged him to a sprint of 100 yards. The challenger was one Warrener, who carries a smile and a good deal of avoirdupois about with him.

The course was measured out. Grim—sure of the distance—said, "Are you ready." "Wait" said the Shakespearean master, "Wait till I take my boots off." The boots were removed. "Are you ready, go." Away raced the two fairy forms. Deeks leads. Warrener wears a strained expression. There is ten dollars on the result. The end is near, a cheer, another cheer rends the air, and Deeks smiles as he shouts "Did you see me BREAST the 'Aus-try-li-an' tape?" Time 12 seconds.

When taking the balls behind cricket stumps,
We all know that Deeks is no dummy,
But now he is racing to ease up his lumps,
And in twelve, BREASTS the tape with his TUMMY.

Why Europe Must Be Cured

Ignorance In The United States As Bar To The Realisation Of Our Vital Interest In Bringing A New Out Of The War-Begotten Chaos

BY CHARLES H. GRASTY
(Special Correspondence of The New York Times)

London, June 1.—Study of the trend of thought among the Europeans who were our associates in the war leads to the conclusion that it would be well for the President of the United States to make a frank statement as to conditions existing in the world—to let the American people know the facts as they are today.

As I listened to Senator Reed speaking a few weeks ago in Washington I was very much impressed with the necessity of bringing the truth home to the people by a clear, frank and full statement of the conditions which exist in Europe. A man could not talk with such levity if the American people understood the conditions. The trouble in this democracy, as in all others, began with military censorship—the suppression of the facts, propagandism and the general loss of interest which resulted, General "Apathy" is always our enemy, but just now it is going to every limit of destructiveness.

Our people have no conception that it is their interest primarily that is suffering, and not the interest of Europe. We have the greatest single stake in the world situation, because we have something to lose. We are the only white nation that is standing up virtually untouched by the war and capable of clear thinking. The other nations have been so deeply wounded that they have lost the power of self-recuperation. Unless we give our help, particularly our mental help and guidance through the difficulties, things may become steadily worse, as they have since the armistice.

The United States is in greater danger today than it was at the time of the German offensive in March, 1918.

ANIMOSITIES NOT ASSUAGED

For nearly a year the tendency toward separation has grown steadily in Europe. There is less faith between man and man, and less among the nations. The countries in Europe are suspicious and jealous of each other, although it must be said that a hopeful sign is found in the recent improvement of relations between France and England.

The feeling in Europe against America has grown, as the feeling in America against Europe has grown.

Underneath the bluff of solidarity among the Allies, Europe from John O'Groats to Constantinople has been near chaos. Hope still shines faintly. Little has been done as yet in the direction of the common interests. Between December, 1918, and July, 1919, there was a fighting chance to induce the nations of Europe to sacrifice their individual interests to some extent and to meet each other on a common ground. At that time Europe was in the agony of war suffering, and the help that America had given inclined the peoples and the Governments to some extent toward optimism. The delay cooled them off, and they swung back to the old cynical view. The only thing that they believe in is force, and they have been reaching out toward the old system of war and balance of power.

There is no occasion for America to become entangled with Europe in any dangerous way. We should not accept the responsibility for the hundreds of years of race and boundary quarrels, war and general mismanagement—a thing, of course, the President has never contemplated our accepting. Our method with Europe ought to be the method that they understand, and not one of spendthrift generosity. Unless the people in the United States search their minds and hearts and find out what they think, and what they will do, and what they will back, Europe may lapse into a barbarism or something like it that will involve us. The element of time is vital. It is absolutely necessary that in any plan we shall adopt we must have American public opinion solidly enlisted.

IGNORANCE OF OUR PUBLIC

A great leader—one of the greatest in Europe—said to me not long ago that America was all right and would do right, but the forces that usually make America right are not at work. Our people are peevish because they are ignorant. They vainly imagine that the war is about over and that whatever is left of it should be got rid of as quickly as possible and on the easiest terms. We fought for democracy and thought we won it. Democracy is fine when it is fine, but it is dependent on public opinion, and there can be no public opinion without information. It seems to me that, if America understood that she was the senior partner in the whole world affair, our people would wake up and take the kind of interest that is essential to a sound settlement.

Germany has had, relatively speaking, a good Government. There has been ample time to extend aid to the movement for democracy, which the actual Government in Germany represented. Our ignorant democracies, still inflamed with the passions of the war, have gone on fighting the war. The opportunity may have passed to help up the sincere, if dull, effort in Germany for democratisation. No democracy, so far as I have been able to observe, has settled down to a businesslike effort to get a peace based on order and enlightened self-interest. It seems to me that the trouble everywhere is traceable to habits that were formed under this system, while we fought and won for publicity and democracy—and it is hard to tell where one begins and the other leaves off, so intimately are they associated as cause and effect—we have temporarily at least destroyed them both. The distemper of ignorance has seized upon every democracy in the world.

STILL IN THE DARK

Of course, in America we use publicity to a greater extent than in any other country. We have a people's press, generally speaking, free, independent and untrammeled, which works closely with the people. But under the war policy of suppression and coloration, the press was more or less paralysed. Even at this moment, nearly two years after the armistice, our people remain in the dark.

Take one instance: I found in addressing American audiences late in the Spring that about the only warm response that I got was on Armenia. Everywhere they wanted to help Armenia; they wanted to raise money and send it to those suffering people. But they would not listen to anything that aimed at a removal of the cause of the Armenian troubles. For nearly a year there had been carried on by our Christian nations the cruelest competition in murder that the world has ever seen. The Greeks killed and robbed all the way from Smyrna deep into the Anatolian hinterland; the French, with whom conditions are now better, recently were making war on people who were our allies during the war, the Arabs in Syria; the Italians were not far behind in the country between Anatolia and Syria, and the British saw to it that their share of the spoil was properly looked after.

I believe that if the American people had been informed as to the conditions which were responsible for the Armenian massacres they would have taken up the question of an American mandate for all the Turkish-speaking people from Constantinople to the Transcaucasian republics. A report made as the result of a most thorough and intelligent investigation, headed by General Harbord, was pigeon-holed in a dusty pigeon-hole in the State Department last October. If the American people had become interested through being told frankly about the conditions, I believe they would have been inclined to accept the great duty of redeeming these peoples from their religious fanaticism, and thus stamping out the great hatchery of war in the world.

AMERICAN HELP A NECESSITY

Perhaps, if the President could and would tell the whole story of world conditions—while it would give offense in many quarters, just as it would always have given offense to tell the truth—it might bring the people back to the old system of searching for the truth and standing up and looking it in the eye when found. And, instead of ignorance and prejudice and apathy, we might have a restoration of the system of public opinion and balanced judgment, without which conditions are hopeless. We must save the situation—or it won't be saved.

I do not believe that the Governments of Europe are deeply interested on the positive side in the League of Nations. What all of them expect, or perhaps desire, is that the United States—the only country that is strong—shall stand up and be counted with them. For unless America maintains an appearance of partnership with them they won't respect each other and the little nations won't respect them.

It seems to me that a picture could be made by the President that might wake up the world—particularly our part of it.

Europe's Great Cockpit For Hundreds Of Years

Visitors To Recent Battlefields Will See Rubbish Heaps, Where History Only Repeated Itself And Scenes Recall Thrilling Episodes

BY MURIEL HARRIS

The poplars still grow along the smooth road from Paris to Calais. The blue Somme winds its way amid lush green banks towards Abbeville.

Gone are the phantoms which lately peopled the road—the endless line of dark green lorries, the pudding shape of the tin hat, the ever-present thudding of tramping feet—tramp, tramp, as though the world were full of men and they were all passing in turn—the horizon-blue sentinels who barred your passage, the monstrous cannon, head low and horrible, with creeping feet, for every whit like the monsters of long ago, ready to branch off to the right where more of their kind thundered endlessly.

Perhaps this was all a dream, a dark and bloody dream wherein legions went up never to return, a dream too vivid yet to be romance, too bloodstained yet to be pure gold. For but for this heavy dream this corner of France and Belgium, this theater of European history, unfolds a tale, a romance which those who look for battlefields should by no means miss.

What if the road were the base of supplies of nearly three armies. What if it sent up its men never to return? What if Chantilly was Joffre's headquarters and Beauvais forgot its tapestries and Amiens tried to protect its Cathedral with sandbags against the shells of the Boche, and St. Omar was once the British headquarters?

THREE MUSKETEERS"

What matters it? Was it not also the scene of the famous ride of D'Artagnan to England to recover Anne of Austria's diamonds and save her honor? Was not Porthos hurt at Chantilly and Aramis fell out at Beauvais and Athos was left behind fighting the Cardinal's minions at Amiens? Did not D'Artagnan take a sorely needed meal at St. Omar, while at Calais he fought the the Comte de Wardes, got his ship and was fired at from the shore?

History never tells its own story. Always it is told by other histories, and those who look for battlefields today will find them best by the battlefields and romances of the past.

The eastern road from Paris, barred until the last year to all and sundry, has similar memories. Noisy-le-Sec trembled before the approaching armies. In 1870 the German guns taught it their horrible lesson. Meaux was within range of the great guns of midsummer, 1918; the bridge at Creil was blown up by the inhabitants, who were shot in consequence. Villers-Cotterets, Compeigne and a dozen others all were names written in letters of blood even a year ago.

But today from the palimpsest that is France the fainter writing slowly emerges from the heavy blottings of the great war. At Noisy, with conventional romance, Aramis courted Mme. de Longueville, whose golden hair and blue eyes were seen by D'Artagnan, concealed in a hedge, in a flood of moonlight. And courting survives war, was before it, goes on after it. The story of Aramis's courting persists even through a tragedy.

At Villers-Cotterets the stout Porthos established himself, rejoicing in his freedom from the rough and tumble of his musketeer life. But Porthos, for all his wine and his mutton and his jewelry, had a secret sorrow. He was not a Baron and consequently he was looked down upon by the little nobility of Villers-Cotterets and Compeigne. Because of this secret sorrow he agreed to leave it all and follow D'Artagnan on more adventures, promised by the crafty Mazarin that some day he should be a Baron.

The adventure led him through the Fonde rebellion and on to England and the luckless Charles to the imprisonment at Villers-Cotterets of that very Mazarin.

'TWENTY YEARS AFTER'

At Compeigne too, young Raoul tried to push on to Noyon, one of the strong points of the 1918 drive. He wished to join Conde in fighting the Spaniards, whose line extended only from the Island Hill of Cassel to Courtrai, and fugitives from which had only to go as far as Arras, another strong point, which held under the German blows. Conde's victory at Lens, later the heart of the coal district, is celebrated in "Twenty Years After" as the greatest victory. Arras, Valenciennes, Bethune, ruined or half ruined today, were scenes of the immortal story. The palimpsest yields up the tale, hidden beneath the sombre writing of the great war.

If history repeats itself it is because geography compels it. The Valley of the Meuse was predestined to be the scene of wars adventure, romance. Whether in reality or in romance these French and Flemish battles were no new thing. Crowded upon the mind by their recent memories they still cannot wipe out the rivers and valleys and hills which turned this northeastern corner into the cockpit of Europe.

For all the ruins of today history can show endless ruins of yore. The surviving works of men's hands are but a fraction of what men's hands have done. Julius Caesar tells his tale as well as another. Church and state wrote the story too. The novelist, the writer has played his part.

When Louis XI. sent Quentin Durward to accompany the Princesses of Croye to the Bishop of Liege's palace the Valley of the Meuse was the path of his pilgrimage just as it was that of the German Armies. The "Boche" did not invent the road from Liege to Namur and thence to Maubeuge, supposedly one of the stoutest fortresses of France.

HIGH ROAD OF THE TRIBES

Flanders—which we used to call France or Belgium—implies invasion. It is the high road of the tribes. It is one of the great romances of Europe.

At Namur, the junction of the Sambre and the Meuse, whither flowed "water as pure," in which the Cardinal, Lord Archbishop of Rheims, liked to wash his hands after a copius banquet, young Quentin had to make the momentous decision of altering the route laid out for him by the perfidious Louis. To save the Ladies of Croye from William de la Marc, "Wild Boar of the Ardennes," he took the left instead of the right bank of the river and brought his charges safely to the Bishop, afterward murdered by his own subjects. In the light of the picture in "Quentin Durward," the fighting powers of the Liegeois, remarked upon by Ludendorff, are not surprising.

"The people of Liege waxed fat and kicked," says the chronicler, and they defied their Liege lord, the Duke of Burgundy, who swore terrible vengeance upon them.

It was awkward for King Louis that, following the advice of his astrologer, he elected just that moment, when the Liegeois had killed their Bishop, to visit Charles of Burgundy at Perrone. Perrone was wanted back by Louis almost as much as it was wanted back by the French in 1918. But Charles was not disposed to allow it to be redeemed. Louis had a narrow escape with his life when the news of the murdered Bishop came to Charles. Perhaps he watched the little blue Somme from Earl Herbert's Tower in which he was duly confined and cursed his own temerity for having thus adventured himself.

Perrone gave the French trouble enough in 1916 during the Somme campaign and situated in flat country with endless moats and ditches and bulwarks, it was a strong fortress in the days of Charles the Bold. It was indeed never taken until the Duke of Wellington took it in his advance on Paris in 1815, when it lost its title of Perrone La Pucelle. Liege suffered for its temerity, but, as is the way with romance, Quentin won his bride, and it is his bride who has come down to history above battles and Kings and states and statesmen.

'MY UNCLE TOBY'

Similarly, it is "My Uncle Toby" who has come down to history as the patron saint of Namur. "My Uncle Toby's" wound, received at Namur at the Bastion of St. Roch, under which he suffered four years, interested him very much in the topography of the place. So he got a map of Namur, and then he made out a map of the exact spot where he received his wound, and thence he went on to parabolas and the flight of shot which bored him in the end, by which time years had gone around, and, as "Tristram Shandy" relates, he told his physician decidedly that he was to hurry up his convalescence. No doubt the siege of Namur in 1914 will have its place in the history books, but "My Uncle Toby" has his place in the book of the world and "Tristram Shandy" has immortalised Namur.

The grand romance concerns Kings and kingdoms. Modern romance comes back to their peoples. The epic of Verdun is one of the great incidents of the war which detaches itself clearly, even at this early date. But Verdun too has other memories than those so recently in our minds.

At Valmy, near Verdun, Goethe saw and celebrated in a poem the first victory of the people against the Kings. Like Russia today, the French Revolution, with its regicide methods, caused outside interference and the Duke of Brunswick led an army against Kellerman to put the upstart mob in its place. By good luck as much as by his own skill, Kellerman defeated the Duke, who retreated bag and baggage by way of Verdun and the Argonne. Goethe was with the German Army and realised the full significance of this people's victory.

London A Boom Town

Talk about New York's taking first place as a great world center away from London has proved to be false, in the opinion of a writer in The London Daily Mail. The English city was never busier or more of a magnet for the world and his wife, he says. Asiatic interests have grown particularly, together with Asiatic visitors.

"There is a bigger rush of new population to London at the present time than to any city in any 'boom' period in the known history of the world," he says. "Many of the newcomers mean to settle down and stay.

"We hear much of the American invasion. It bids fair to be rivaled by the Oriental invasion, the Dominions invasion, and the coming of the Continentals.

"The reasons for this rush are many. London has, since the war, become the focus of the world. It is here that the fate of nations is now settled. If you have a new crusade to launch, a new religion to preach, an ancient nation to save from tyranny, or a reform to advocate, London is the starting place.

"New York City thought a year ago that she had wrested our financial and commercial supremacy from us; New York has since learned her mistake. Paris retains her charm; but men believe that the clouds are gathering there and the storm may burst. In London the social barometer marks 'set fair.'

"Business men from overseas are pouring in because they realise that London today is the world's 'boom' city. There is, for example, more land speculation going on here at present than in the wildest Western city at the height of the wildest Western boom.

"One man only a few days ago was offered £200,000 profit on a single real estate deal in West London and refused it. Fortunes are being made here overnight. The rises in value are not all illusory either. If the present rush means anything, it means that within ten years London will be a city of ten million people. That will automatically send central site values up by at least 50 percent.

"It is now possible for Asiatics to come here in big numbers for the first time in their history. London has for two centuries been the Mecca of the East, but poverty made the Oriental view it from afar. Thanks to the war, the economic position of Asia has been transformed. Eight hundred million people have found their wages and prices trebled almost in a day and their products in overwhelming demand.

"This is one of the most vitally important events in recent history. One of its secondary results has been to enable large numbers of Asiatics to come to their dream city, London. We shall have an Oriental quarter here, as San Francisco and Victoria have; the poor Oriental who accompanies the rich will settle among us, and the Chinese servant will be a familiar figure.

"The Americans are coming here for varied reasons, some for pleasure, some to escape prohibition, some to be near the graves of their sons who fell in the war. American business men have discovered that almost the only way to tackle trade in Europe is to start by establishing an English branch with financial and administrative headquarters in London.

"The holiday makers are coming from the ends of the world by the scores of thousands, because the world has discovered that London today is the most delightful city on earth. Other cities charm on the surface but disappoint beneath. But men of East and West alike find that the more they know of London the better they love it. Nowhere can one find such varied interests to absorb one.

"London is supreme again, Mistress of the World. The coming of the great army of new settlers among us is going to make certain profound changes in our lives and great differences in the external aspect of London. What some of these changes will probably be must be a matter for separate description."

The Morning's Mornin'

The Men-Who-Might-Have-Been

The port of Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Lies just off Hasbeenville.
And all the Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Are shabby, gray, and still.
One missed a punch; one married wrong;
Ambition died in one.
One loved the light; the lights o' nights
That blaze behind the sun—

By Gosh! It gives a man a chill
To see them, shabby, gray, and still—
So many Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
In the port of Hasbeenville.

The port of Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Is crowded to the doors.
And all the Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Are very dreadful bores.
Their tales are old; their tales are dry—
One trusted in a friend;
One lacked the part; one lacked the heart
To seek the rainbow's end.

By Gosh! It gives a man the mopes
To see them sitting there like dopes—
So many Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
In the port of Busted Hopes.

The port of Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Is east of Used-to-Be.
And all the Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Are carried passage free.
I've seen it pass, their boat of glass,
And drift along the years
With all the Men-Who-Might-Have-Been
Past shoals of bitter sneers.

By Gosh! It makes a fellow sigh
To see the good ship, Alibi—
With all those Men-Who-Might-Have-Been,
And cargoes of careers!

Europe's Great Cockpit For Hundreds Of Years

and Coucy suggest Paladins rather than Robert Louis Stevenson, whose "Inland Voyage" lends them a romance which is the eternal romance of peoples. At La Fere Stevenson even then heard the artillery practising, as in the little canoe from the Golden Valley he saw the wooded spurs of Coucy and St. Gobain, later to form so formidable a bastion.

Stevenson started from Antwerp, missed the Brussels-Charleroi district with its fifty locks and arrived after much difficulty with the frontiersmen—a difficulty every foreigner will now appreciate in Europe—at the Grand Cerf at Maubeuge. From Maubeuge he dawdled along to Landrecies—a name indissolubly connected with the end of the war—and thence through La Fere, Noyon down to Creil again and Pontoise.

Even Stevenson in an era of peace with the idlest, most peaceable intentions could not miss the path which the war was later to take. And it is just from his angle of the leisurely observer that the war really becomes apparent to the visitor of battlefields. What greater contrast than the "Inland Voyage" to that German onrush, with its subsequent retreat? The "Inland Voyage" puts it all in perspective, for rivers remain and hills remain and so do the eternal valleys.

NAPOLEON'S ATTEMPTS

Probably because of its fine beaches the coast from Ostend to Dunkirk inevitably suggested pleasuring on an extensive scale, gambling, racing, sea bathing and North Sea air—those were the characteristics among others of Jean Bart, the privateer's, town of Dunkirk, also of Nieuport and La Panne. Everybody forgot that only a hundred years earlier they had been the scene of the Napoleonic attempts to invade England; that to this day there stands at Boulogne the great column raised to celebrate the event which never materialised. And everybody was surprised when exactly the same thing happened again and the coast towns of England were awaiting possible invasion, as they had waited a hundred years before. This water-logged, pollard-willow country gradually expresses itself anew in terms of Ypres and Furnes and Poperhinge and Dixmude, and these towns in their turn became battered ruins, as they had become long ago. For the glory of Ypres had already departed, save for the cloth hall, through the ravages of war.

Once more, a hundred years later, here were the privateers and the cannons and the flooding of the dykes. Here was the link with the past in the little fortified town of Bergues, fortified centuries ago, but being fortified and having three canals must be shelled according to the rules.

These Flemish towns tell their own stories. It is easier to realise them in the war than is the case with more modern places, just because of their mediaevalism. They have merely continued their tradition, and those who go to see them now could not protest against invasion or sacking or any of the practises of long ago should they once more come to life To see the battlefields is to see a rubbish heap, waste earth, disorder. To see the cockpit of Europe is a very much easier matter.

Hankow Market

July 14, 1920.

FINANCE AND MONEY MARKET

A quiet week with very few bills offering and little or no demand. Taels T. T. on Shanghai Chinese market fell to 96.475 nominal. Foreign Banks sold at 96.7. Dollars rose in sympathy with Shanghai market to 70.8-71, but fell again to 70.5-70.7 buyers and sellers respectively, on the 14th inst. Interest after being 5 percent for the early part of the week, rose on the 14th inst. to 7½ percent. Changsha exchange. Nominal.

IMPORTS

There is absolutely nothing doing—no inquiry and no Clearances. Improvement need not be expected until the hordes of soldiers now practically surrounding Hankow, move away, and the Political situation adjusts itself.

EXPORTS

Business continues very quiet and though we hear of cheap offers in the markets at Home few purchases of any kind are reported. There is considerable anxiety felt locally regarding the politica situation which has again become very obscure.
